Wendy Jackson our April 4th Speaker Executive Director Freshwater Land Trust

7pm on April 4th join us at the BGG

Wendy will be speaking about Preserving the Places That Matter.

Freshwater Land Trust's mission is the acquisition and stewardship of lands that enhance water quality and preserve open space. We have protected - or helped to protect - over 10,000 acres, and we work to conserve more land every day. Freshwater has many important projects and ongoing partnerships, and these are some of the current highlights.

Red Mountain Park A 1108 acre tract that could become one of the largest urban parks in the nation

Seven Springs A spring that is home to the federally endangered watercress darter and owned by Faith Apostolic Church in Powderly, Alabama

Five Mile Creek A 28-mile stream flowing through northern Jefferson County that has inspired a nationally recognized partnership and a model for river restoration and conservation

Turkey Creek Nature Preserve A 700-acre nature preserve exists along Turkey Creek that preserves a scenic and historic resource

Shades Creek Shades Creek is a major tributary to the Cahaba River, running 56.4 miles from its source near the Birmingham Race Course, through Shades Valley, to the Cahaba River near the Shelby County/Bibb County line. Along the way it passes through Irondale, Birmingham, Mountain Brook, Homewood, Hoover, and Bessemer

Please remember to pay your dues.

Certificate in Native Plant Studies at the Kaul Wildflower Garden

The Gardens launches its new Certificate in Native Plant Studies program this spring! The curriculum combines core courses, electives, field trips and volunteer service, giving students a well-rounded educational experience revolving around native plants, conservation, and environmental education and service. Classes will be held at The Gardens as well as Ruffner Mountain Nature Center, Aldridge Botanical Gardens and sites managed by the Alabama Plant Conservation Alliance.

Core courses will be offered every other month, as will various electives. Students may begin their certificate with any course, but we suggest starting with Introduction to the Study of Native Plants to gain a basic understanding of the program's scope. Certificates will be awarded to those who fulfill requirements within three years, but anyone is welcome to attend any of the courses.

Registration and further information about the program, including course descriptions, instructor bios and certificate requirements can be found at www.bbgardens.org/plantstudies. Contact Kaul Wildflower Garden Curator John Manion at 205.414.3985 or jmanion@bbgardens.org for details.

Take a look at our stunning new logo! We hope you agree with us that it captures both the wonderful natural elements of Ruffner mountain, but also a bit of history. The history of Birmingham reflected in the steep quarry face on the right side of the mountain, the history of the great social elements of the WPA (Works Progress Administration) style in which it was designed and the natural history of our region, as seen in the gentle drape of the longleaf pine in the foreground. It says who we are, where we come from and what we care about.

Note another thing about that logo... It says Preserve not Center. Ruffner Mountain Nature Center is Alabama's oldest. But we have evolved since 1977, no longer are we a couple of small houses tucked away in a neighborhood. We now manage one of the largest privately managed urban natural areas in the country! We are a significant chunk of the greenspace that is turning Birmingham into one of the greenest city in America.

So, while we will continue to be a place for people, with exciting recreational opportunities and stirring educational offerings, while we will continue to be Birmingham's oasis; we must recognize that all that is only possible if we preserve and restore the outstanding natural resource that makes it possible. Thus the longleaf pine in the logo not only celebrates our natural history, but it also speaks to preserving and restoring these wild elements for future generations - it says where we are going.
